THE CELESTIAL EMPIRE.

WEEKLY RECORD OF COMMERCE POLITICS, LITERATURE AND SCIENCE.

THE wide scope of this periodical, embracing, as it does, information of the most varied nature on matters connected with China and the Chineso-their language, literature, customs and politics; local and foreign intelligence; a complete compendium of all the commercial news of the week, with the well-known Shanghai Statistics of Imports, and Export-tables of Produce; and summarising the literary gossip of every European man, upon its arrival, from the best of the London and New York Papers-renders it peculiarly adapted alike for circulation at the Out-Ports and in Japan, and for transmission to one's friends at Home. ITS LARGE CIRCULATION AT THE OUTPORTS RENDERS IT AN EXCELLENT MEDIUM FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

Subscription, Twelve Dollars per Annum.

THE SUBSCRIPTION FOR GHANGHAI COURIER AND CHINA GAZETTE! IS NOW REDUCED

Twenty Dollars per Annum, WHICH MAKES IT THE CHEAPAST DAILY PAPER IN CHINA

Its increasing circulation renders it particularly well adapted for ADVERTISEMENTS.

Which are inserted on very reasonable terms Shanghai, December 17, 1875.

HONGKONG, FRIDAY, JAN. 14, 1876.

Two very opposite and, equally incorrect views have at various times been put forth by foreign writers on the subject of the China Tea trade. The enormous population of the Empire, its undoubted wealth in the matter of bullion, and the comparatively few ports whence the export of Tea has been permitted, have led one class of observers to maintain that the foreign trade in this article was too insignificant a matter to be even mentioned in any discussion upon policy of the Imperial authorities. Others again, chiefly of the mercantile class, have entertained an exaggerated opinion of the importance of the trade to Chinese interests, and have imagined that stoppage would put immense pressure on the country at large. As is us such cases the truth lies between the two extremes. The Tea trade is undoubtedly valued, not merely on account of revenue it yields by way of duties to the Imperial exchequer, but on account of the large extent of population whom the growth of the shrub employs. As an industry which occupies numerous hands -more especially in the provinces of Fuhkien, Chekiang, Anhui, Hunan, and Hupeh,-the cultivation of Tea is of national inportance. The aggregate consumption of the leaf by the Chinese themselves is estimated by Williams at 700 millions of pounds, while the export which in 1861 was 130 millions has now reached about 180 millions, or somewhat more than a fifth of the whole production. In 1847 the proportionate consumption of various countries was stated as England 58 millions, United States 18, Netherlands 2, Russia 5, Germany 3, New South Wales 4, and Spain, France and other countries 3 millions, making total of 93 millions of pounds in all If this estimate was correct, the export trade has since then nearly doubled,--Australia and the United States having vastly increased their consumption, while in Great Britain it has also increased to a remarkable extent, Tea has never obtained great favour amongst the Romance nations, and it is probable that no great change in the consumption above recorded has taken place in France, Spain, Italy, &c. The increased consumption in other quarters be seriously affected. From Foothow alone the exports for the past season were, to Europe 62,590,776 lbs., to Australia and New Zealand 15,985,074 lbs., and to the United States 2,718,886 lbs. making a total of 61,294,785 lbs. tetutus from the other ports showing an edual increase (Shanghai exporting 80,864,874 lbs. last season), our estimate is probably about the mark. It would, however, be folly to assume that China even yet regards the foreign trade in tesas vital to her well-being. But a marked improvement in tone is visible in the way the subject is now spoken of, as compared with the superstitious language times. And attention having been talled to the numerous adulterations which the leaf undergoes at the hands of native teamen, very strong remonstrances brought into play. The native press is

Indian competition may inflict upon the presperity. Self interest is at the bottom China trade, and is speaking in a very straightforward way about the matter. A local native contemporary, only a few days ago, pôinted out that the Chinese dealers are following a suicidal policy In the first place, foreigners will not, it says, import from China if they can get a better article nearer home; and India offers them the advantage of a pure unmixed leaf, while China persists in mixing good with inferior qualities to on the benevolently inclined Chinese to swell the bulk of the former. journal in question points out that the result is to lessen foreign belief in the purity of the Chinese teas, and that, though individuals may make money the general character of the trade must suffer. It is pleasing to see a native Hongkong. The same issue has an article journalist thus remonstrating against acts, which if not fraudulent (so long as the teas are sold as mixed) are highly to be deprecated. It is through the native press alone that the minds of the natives of the interior can be reached, and that chiefly through the Chinese mercantile communities at the ports, who as a rule Our Prices for Carte de Visite are shrewd enough to see the folly of depreciating the value of the trade they live by. It is to be hoped that articles such as that under notice will be extensively read. It would pay the co-operate. leading tea-houses to disseminate copies of them amongst the tea merchants, and bring sensible expostulation in their own language to bear upon them. Honesty is to them simply a matter business, and if they can be convinced that it will pay best, they will observe in reference to the Yunnan question-were it. At the same time we quite understand that (except in such flagrant cases as the exportation of Malco mixture and flith) it is difficult to draw the line between honesty and its reverse when teas are in question. Casuists might hesitate to say whether selling mixed teas a

"the best procurable," which would in one sense be true, would be a legally dishonest act. But that it involves an approach to dishonesty is undoubted. the Chinese are wise they will do their best to restore the tone of the tea market to its former high standard Europeans who play into the hands of natives, to whose eagerness in moneymaking the lowering of that standard is due, deserve no pity if their ventures turn out unprofitably.

RESIDENTS in China have a more than | the Chief Officer Joseph Murphy with disindirect interest in the problem of constructing an interoceanid canal between the Atlantic and the Pacific. The saving of time and expense which would result in opening this more direct communication between China and Japan and the Eastern Coast of the United States or the Western countries of Europe are too obvious to need insisting We are glad therefore to notice by the latest New York papers that President Grant will in his annual message report to Congress in favor of building ship canal connecting the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. The Commissioners who make the report were appointed by the Secretary of the Navy to investigate the merits of various ship canal routes. San Francisco Bulletin adds that the report as already completed by the Commission is merely a preliminary one, and it is to be followed by a more voluminous report, giving more in detail the history of the examination and the reason for the decision at which they have arrived that the Nicaragua route is the most feasible of all the routes surveyed. This report will be given to the President in order that he may be able to present the matter to Congress in his message. The President takes the greatest possible interest in the interoceanic canal scheme and will do all in his power to promot its interests. The expense of this important undertaking is estimated at sixty odd millions of dollars, and the American papers are loudly advocating that the construction be undertaken by their own Government alone. To allow any foreign power to build this canal, and levy taxes for its use, is something which United States would never tolerate. This is well enough if (as we believe i the case) the Nicaraguans are perfectly willing to be incorporated with the republic. The Suer Canal difficulties Lat doubtless taught our cousins a useful lesson. They will have the sympathies of all friends of progress in the successful outcome of their project.

By kind permission of the Commodore, the service for Bailors will be held on board H. M. S. Victor Emmanuel on Sunday morning, at ten o'clock. A launch will go round the harbour as usual to collect those wishing to attend.

AT the Marine Court to-day, Morris Clancy, an able seaman on board the British barque Craigis Lea, was charged by obedience of orders and attempting to assault him. It appeared from the evidence produced that the defendant was ordered to sweep some dirt up and failed to do so, and that he had Iooked at the Chief Officer in an insolent manner. The defendant denied having refused duty and said the Chief Officer struck him in the face. The case was dismissed. Last evening the children of the Diocesan Home and Orphanage had their Annual Ohristmas Tree. Through the kindness of a member of the Committee, (Mr H. E. THE CHORAL SOCIETY'S CONCERT. The 2nd Concert this season of the above Society took place in St. Andrew's Hall last evening, before a very good andience. H E. the Governor and Miss Kennedy were present, as were also most of the leading members of the Community. The Society may be congratulated on their efforts to please, this Concert being a far greater success than the previous one, especially asregards the part singing.

The two Overtures by the orchestra (Zampa and Oberon) were very well performed; in Zampa the 1st Violins (led by a well-known amateur) carried the Overture throughout, and in the quick movement, after the Piu Lente, the strings came out well and clear. Why the time should have been accelerated after these movements (where all the instruments come in fortissimo) was hardly understood, the fine pompous and stately movement following being a little spoilt in our opinion by the rush. The Amateurs, however, may be congratulated if they always meet with equal success.

"Oberon," considering the difficulty of the overture, went very well. The 2nd Violins were rather weak, however, but the gentlemen amateurs and the other members of the Orchestra will be glad to know that the effect as a whole was good. No. 2 in the first part of the programme was the double Chorus "Baal we cry to thee" (Elijah). went very steadily, the 2nd Choir singing well and effectively; the 1st was rather weak and the absence of 2nd Trebles made this Choir rather thin. However this is the first double Chorus that the Society has ever undertaken, and the result was most satisfactory. In the 2nd Chorus, "He watching over Israel." the time-was bad; it-was-takentoo slow and lost the allegro swing it should carry. Otherwise this Chorus went well, the different leads of the beautiful subject running throughout it being taken up very steadily.

The Baritone Song (The Wanderer, by Schubert) was sung by a well-known Amateur, whose voice happily was in splendid form and was heard to great advantage in this

The Sonata for Viologicello and Piano (Reinecke) was played by two gentlemen, who are both well known for their musical taste and talent, and was heartily appreciated. This was the instrumental treat of the evening, and nothing but a sense of the injustice of such a demand prevented an encore. The Trio "Lift thine eyes" (Elijah), although unsteady at starting, went better towards the end. It is at all times a more trying task to sing without accompaniment, and the Trio or Terzetto, as it is called in the programme, is undoubtedly a difficult one. The Hunting Song (Mendelssohn) might have been taken a trifle faster as it is written: it was sung briskly and the Bassesopportunity in bringing out their We should not however designate it as one of the most successful pieces of the evening. The Duette (Il Bacio d'Amore) for two Sopranos was the most pleasing piece in the programme, and was sung with great taste. A Vocal Solo (not in the programme L'Ebreo by Apolloni, was also given by lady whom it is always a treat to hear, and whose singing so much enhances the pleasure of our local concerts. ALLEGED RAPE.

Choy Sing Nam, Compradore to Mesars Jardine, Matheson & Co., was again brought up to answer the above charge. Mr Sharp the Crown Solicitor, appeared for the prosecution. Mr Hayllar, Q.O., instructed by Mr Dennys, appeared for the defence.

Mr Sharp briefly opened the case for the prosecution, after which Inspector Whitehead was called :- I am inspector of brothels. I arrested the defendant by virtue of a warrant on the 12th inst. I went to his house first, but he was not at home. I then went to Mesars Jardine's office, and the defendant was in a room where there were three men at the time. The girl was with me, and she pointed out the defendant. She pointed out the defendant Sing Nam. I asked him if he knew her, and he said "yes" and called her "Amui." The girl, said something to the effect "Sam Lo Ye (squire No. 3). I then took him into custody. I took the girl to the Sang Kee Club a few days ago. She pointed out to me a room where she was taken into (the description was the same as that the witness had given the other day in Wong A-sz's case). I knew personally nothing about the character of this Club.

By Mr Hayllar :- I heard the girl use some words resembling in sound "Sam Lo Ye." The girl looked modest and had her eyes down. The defendant looked as if he knew the girl. The room was made thin boards on one side. I noticed there was a hasp and keeper outside and one There was a hook and a hasp There was a window which looked on to a window of a house—in Lyndhurst Terrace. It was two or three yards distant. The length of the passage from the entrance of this room to the Club room was between 6 and 7 yards. If both doors were opened, one could not see from the bed room into the Club room, because it would be out of the line. Re-examined :-The window has wooden shutters and there are bars. When it was closed, it was closed altogether. The view from it was chiefly the roof of the opposite house, and broken tiles.

Wong Amui was called :- I am 17 years of age. I am a native of Shuntak. I came to Hongkong five years ago. Since then I have been living with a woman named Wong A-sz all the time. I know Ko Lo Cheung ; he was the good friend of my mistress. Mr Sharp proposed to ask how the gir was treated in the house.

Mr Hayllar objected, because her treatment would not affect his client, who was charged with rape, unless conspiracy was intended to be proved. Continued:-In the beginning of the 8th moon, I remember going to the Theatre (Koshing) with Ko Lo Cheung. Nobody told me to go. He took me there. After the play was over, he said to me "let us take a walk and then we will go home." He took me to the Sang Kee Olub house. I did not know that name at that time. had pointed out this house to the Inspector. It was about 11 o'clock at night when I was taken there. Ko Lo Cheung took me into the room. The room was just at the top of the landing to the top floor. It was at the back part of the house. There was a bed in the room; it was fitted up as a bed-I have since pointed out the room to Inspector Whitehead. Nobody was in the room when I went in with Ko Lo Cheung. I stopped there a little time, and Ko Lodefendant known as Sam Lo Yé came into Previous to Ko Lo Cheung's departure, nobody had come inside the room. Sam Lo Yé then came in. Sing Nam is what I call-Sam Lo-Yé (points out the defendant). The defendant then closed the door. He smoked a few pipes and then went out to take supper, leaving me in the room alone. Ko Lo Cheung was in the room when the defendant came in to smoke. Ko Lo Cheung and the defendant had some conversation in a language. I did not understand. The defendant came back after supper, and Ko Lo Cheung had left me then. He said he would go out for a walk and would come back to fetch me home. When the defendant came in again, he took off his clothes, and told me to take off mine. I took off my outer jacket. I was sitting on a chair at the time, and he put his hand round my body and carried me to the bed. I was crying then, weeping. . crying. Ko Lo Cheung called out from outside, "If you cry I will tell your mistress, Sz Koo, to best you," I dared not speak After the affair, the defendant asked me to shampoo him, and I did so for about two hours. After this, I tried to get but I could not open the door. pulled the door, but could not open it. While I was trying the door, the defendant said you had better go to-morrow morn-I shampooed him again for a little The defendant then committed the offence charged again, and I did not resist because I heard Ko Lo Cheung's voice outside, and because I could not open the door. I did not cry out for help, but went only. I shampooed him for the third time, when I felt sleepy and went off to sleep. I left at daybreak next morning. I went straight into the street. Ko Lo Cheung did not come back to fetch me. When I got up, I pulled at the door and I found I could open it. Brussels, Nov. 28 .- Le Nord, a Russian organ, thinks that however great the consequences of England's purchase of the Suez Canal may be, the transaction cannot endanger the peace of Europe. It affects the countries bordering on the Mediterranean, especially France, and it seems impossible for the affair to be completed without some international arrangement. It would amount to sheer confiscation for England to undertake to manage the canal. It cannot be desired that the civilizing work of the canal shall become a mere inmade to render the change compatible with the interests of the world, and a means of 'solid guarantees.
